California School Employees Association stands with California Faculty Association in support of one-day strike

SAN JOSE—The 220,000-member California School Employees Association is in full support of the California Faculty Association’s planned one-day strike planned for Nov. 17. Association President Allan Clark said classified school employees endorse the efforts of the 23,000 California State University system faculty members that comprise the CFA.

“The California School Employees Association stands wholeheartedly with the proud members of California Faculty Association. CFA members have dedicated their lives to educating California’s students, and they deserve to be treated with respect,” Clark said. “For California State University executives to demand that CFA members surrender their modest, negotiated pay increases while continuing to provide excellent service to students with less resources is absolutely appalling. CFA members deserve better, CSU staff deserves better and the students of California deserve much better. We all join CFA in standing up for high-quality education and making students the top priority.”
