Dear Colleagues,

As we enter this new academic year, our attention remains with addressing important issues our university system struggles to solve.

The CSU must address Title IX complaints and procedures and create structural change that improves the learning and working conditions of all CSU community members. We look forward to working with Interim Chancellor Jolene Koester in helping her to address and resolve these concerns.

CFA leaders work diligently to protect faculty health, safety, and rights guaranteed under our Collective Bargaining Agreement. Our contract serves the interests of both faculty and the university, as faculty working conditions are also student learning conditions. With CFA, faculty have a powerful voice to enact needed systemic change for an improved university system for students, faculty, and staff.

Our members overwhelmingly ratified our new contract, one that reflects our commitment to addressing anti-racism and social justice issues and working conditions of faculty in the CSU.

We increased exceptional service awards and finally named cultural taxation as a workload problem faced by underrepresented faculty. We now have the explicit ability to rebut bias in student evaluations. Our contract also became one of the first in the country to protect faculty from caste discrimination.

We made permanent the right to a reduced workload for new tenure-line probationary faculty for the first two years. We won rights ensuring tenure-line faculty are not assigned teaching or service duties while on sabbatical leave, secured continuance of the Faculty Early Retirement Program for five years, and multi-year salary increases.

We won expanded salary range elevation for lecturers and secured three years of expanded eligibility for lecturers and librarians shut out of the program in the past. Counselors and librarians secured improved working conditions through modernized telework. Coaches now have more stable job security with the opportunity for multi-year contracts.

Our work, our advocacy, remains steadfast. We begin bargaining again in 2023 on salary and workload. We look forward to all of you working with your chapters to support our efforts during the next round of bargaining.

We are pleased to have you as colleagues, and we are committed to supporting your work in the university.
